IAPD Information About Representatives

IAPD offers information on all current-and many former representatives. Investors are strongly encouraged to use IAPD to check the background of representatives before deciding to conduct, or continue to conduct, business with them.

What is included in a IAPD report?

IAPD reports for individual representatives include information such as employment history, professional qualifications, disciplinary actions, criminal convictions, civil judgments and arbitration awards.

It is important to note that the information contained in an IAPD report may include pending actions or allegations that may be contested, unresolved or unproven. In the end, these actions or allegations may be resolved in favor of the representative, or concluded through a negotiated settlement with no admission or finding of wrongdoing.

Where did this information come from?

The information contained in IAPD comes from the Investment Adviser Registration Depository (IARD) and FINRA's Central Registration Depository, or CRD, (see more on CRD below) and is a combination of:

- information the states require representatives and firms to submit as part of the registration and licensing process, and
- information that state regulators report regarding disciplinary actions or allegations against representatives.

How current is this information?

Generally, representatives are required to update their professional and disciplinary information in IARD within 30 days.

Are there other resources I can use to check the background of investment professionals?

It is recommended that you learn as much as possible about an individual representative or Investment Adviser firm before deciding to work with them. Jane Mephram is contracted out as a financial planner for Blend Financial, Inc. dba Origin Financial ("Origin Financial"). There is no relationship that exists between EFA and Origin Financial. This arrangement may present a material conflict of interest because she might be incentivized to refer Origin's clients to EFA's service. Though this is highly unlikely, EFA will address this conflict of interest by conducting proper due diligence on any prospective clients, and will only accept clients if EFA's service are truly suitable to the client's needs.

Jane Mephram does contract work as a public speaker for speaking engagement or financial coaching-related workshops. Jane does not provide individualized investment advice as part of this activity. This activity accounts for 5% of Jane Mephram's time. This outside business activity does not affect clients of Elgon Financial Advisors.
